News:

United States-Japan Trade Agreement

The United States and Japan have reached an agreement in which Japan that includes the elimination or lower tariffs for certain U.S. agricultural products. The agreement will provide U.S. farmers, ranchers and agribusinesses enhanced market access for high quality U.S. food and agricultural products to 127 million Japanese consumers. The agreement is not a comprehensive Free Trade Agreement, which both countries have pledged to begin negotiating in 2020.

Under the new agreement, over 90 percent of U.S. food and agricultural products imported into Japan will either be duty free or receive preferential tariff access. Under the agreement Japan will provide a country-specific quota for wheat and wheat products and reduce the mark-up on imported U.S. wheat and barley. When the agreement is implemented by Japan, American farmers and ranchers will have the same advantage as CP-TPP countries selling into the Japanese market. The United States will provide tariff elimination or reduction on 42 tariff lines for agricultural imports from Japan valued at $40 million in 2018.

NAEGA is seeking clarification of provisions in the U.S. Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Asset Control \(OFAC\) Specially Designated National (SDN) List related to the role of the Central Bank of Iran. ### U.S. ITC Investigation off MRL Impact on Trade

The U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC) has begun an investigation into the global economic impact of maximum residue level (MRL) policies for pesticides. In response to a request by the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR), ITC indicated that MRLs, particularly those that are missing or low, can serve as barriers to U.S. agricultural exports.

The ITC states it will issues two reports, one on April 30, 2020, and one on November 2, 2020, which will contain information on:

- The role of plant protection products and their MRLs in relation to global production, international trade, and food safety for consumers.
- The approaches taken in setting national and international MRLs for crops - risk-based approach vs. hazard-based approach.
- How MRLs are developed and administered in major markets for U.S. agricultural exports.
- Challenges and concerns faced by exporting countries in meeting importing country MRLs.
- The costs and effects of MRL compliance and non-compliance for producers.
- How missing and low MRLs affect production, exports, farmer income, and prices, both on the national level and, to the extent possible, for small and medium-sized farms

The ITC will hold a hearing in connection with this investigation October 29. Written submissions are due December 13 for the first report and June 5 for the second report. The full notice from ITC can be found here.
